Bathroom Suites

The kitchen is considered the heart of the home, but nowadays the bathroom might just be the soul.

For prospective tenants and guests, having a place to retreat to for a hot shower or a long, relaxing soak can make all the difference to a property - so let's avoid the avocado suites, brown bathmats, and spluttering extractor fans and put together bathrooms to be proud of.

Over the next few pages you'll find a selection of Nabis bathroom suites specified as either cloakrooms (toilet + basin + brassware) or as full suites (cloakroom suite + bath + bath filler). Each is fully customisable, so you can mix and match to your heart's content, and you'll find the individual SKUs, prices, and product numbers listed in full, so you know what you're buying.

For technical information, including guidance on warranties, materials used, and fitting instructions, simply search for the product code listed on Wolseley's website (Wolseley.co.uk) et voila!

Baths

What's a bathroom without a bath? No bathroom at all.

Whilst it's becoming more and more popular nowadays for investors and homeowners to think outside of the bath and concentrate on saving space and water with a shower enclosure instead, we believe there's no replacing a long, hot soak in the tub.

You'll find over the next few pages an arrangement of shaped, straight, and freestanding tubs - along with panels and screens to fit glovelike (and more importantly, watertight) around the curves and edges of one of life's simplest little luxuries.

And while spaces can vary, any self-respecting bathroom can accommodate one: shaped as chunky capital Ps, Ls, or Is, and, strange though it may seem, left-handed, right-handed, and even no-handed at all.

For those seeking impact and versatility, there really is nothing like a good bath.

Merlyn

You might know Merlin as that old geezer that would follow King Arthur around casting spells.

But we know Merlyn as purveyors of a very different kind of magic: the almost alchemic transformation of your showering space to something wondrous.

In fact, Merlyn are perhaps as sexy as brands get in the bathroom world, and their jawdropping designs are matched by their pricing as an LNPG partner over the last five years.

Is this going into every rental bathroom suite? No, we don't think so. But in finding a balance between quality, style, and price, you've got a real opportunity to elevate your bathrooms far beyond what the market would deem 'good enough' and into the realms of luxury that lasts for years on end.

So high-end HMOs, Serviced Apartments looking for that special something, or even your own escape at home (hey, why not?) can now be given a little of that Merlyn magic.
